SAFE MOVE REQUIREMENTS FOR WARRANTY

Please let the movers know what needs special care in moving before they start the move. If an item is damaged at any point or you know of a particular weakness an item has the movers must be informed so they have the best chance of moving your item safely. Certain items can't be moved safely without special protection and they will not be warrantied if the homeowner opts to forgo protection.

Certain high-value items and artwork need to be crated if they are too big and delicate to be effectively blanket wrapped or boxed. Flat-screen TV's need to be put into TV boxes.

Pictures and flat glass must be protected and put into picture boxes.

Lampshades and other delicates must be padded and boxed.

Pressed wood products like IKEA are notorious for only coming together properly once. Moving, taking them apart, putting them together the second time may cause damage. IKEA provides handymen that are used to their products and they will have the best chance of making sure your product can be re-used. Our movers will do what you ask but we will not take liability for damage.

Items packed by the homeowner will not be warrantied.

As well, not all items can safely go where you want them. The movers will let you know if trying to get an item where you want it is risky and you will have to assume liability if you decide that you want them to do it regardless.

NOTES REGARDING WAIVER IF NEEDED

The client must let their movers know how they want their move done. Forgoing protection or taking risk is allowed if the client takes responsibility. Some risk is normal but if the risk is high the movers will inform the client on what is relevant and what they think is unsafe. Verbal agreements are usually just fine but sometimes getting it in writing is better. The notes section below can be used to elaborate if needed.
